Unfortunately not. I think we've waited long enough now. If we still haven't received one from him, we're going to have to deliver regardless for testing, otherwise it will delay all of us. We're not testing until later at 2pm, so I'll leave it with you to decide up to how long you can wait that's comfortable for you.

Agreed!

Have you had a look at what Harrison has done?

I've just seen it now. It wasn't really what we asked for. i.e. simple webpage.
Then again, maybe this is what's simple for him, I don't know.

Saying that though, I don't think the nav button is working for Harrison's page on the final website.
That will be down to the folder organisation I would've guessed.
We could always just leave it for the next 'sprint' though as part of the evaluation.
Since the page was received late, there wasn't enough time to incorporate it with the main website or something like that.
Alternatively, you can still fix it if you want, but I'll leave it up to you.

Between you and me, I had trouble incorporating it into the website because he had so much in-style CSS that I was unsure where to put the links for everyone's else page and my Visual Studio didn't like his webpage link
I did try to fix it though.

That's a fair comment and attempt, so I say don't sweat it!

I think he wants to showcase his skills which is fine and he's got good skills. But that's not the requirements of this specific unit and he didn't follow our collaborative agreement.

Unfortunately, since he has included his own complex CSS coding and submitted his webpage late, it became more difficult to merge his webpage with our website in less than 24 hours.

Well done and don't worry about it. 😊
